Egypt Holds Jews In Terror

Seventy-five thousand Jewish residents of Egypt have been the victims of a "general reign of terror" for the last eight months, the American Jewish Committee charged. In a thirty-five-page report, the committee said that the "facts" had been almost completely hidden until now by strict censorship.

However, from Jews who escaped to Paris and from "our very able and efficient intelligence service," the Committee now has been able to piece together the story, Joseph M. Proskauer, president of the group, declared in New York after he had distributed the report.

"The situation today," he said in his office in 386 Fourth Avenue, "is that these 75,000 Jews are threatened with absolute extermination."

Not only Jews, but also to a lesser extent all other non-Moslem residents of Egypt, have been suffering various forms of persecution, he asserted. The reason, he insisted, is that Egypt wants to divert its citizens' attention from "intolerable domestic conditions and disastrous foreign adventures."

The committee's report was presented with a fifty-page appendix consisting of photostats of several recent Egyptian Government decrees and of recent Egyptian newspaper articles. The former were written in French and the latter in Arabic or French. Partial translations into English were included in the text of the report.

A copy of the report was forwarded about three weeks ago to the U.S. State Department, Mr. Proskauer noted, "although obviously the department has no authority except that of using its good offices."

"We can't ask them to do more at this time," he said.

The report and the documents both fall into two sections — one dealing with so-called "official" restrictions tending to cause oppression and the other with alleged incitement to mob violence."

In the first category were summaries of a number of decrees promulgated since May, 1948. None specifically singled out Jews for special treatment, but the report said that all had been "in fact applied almost exclusively against Jews."

One decree, published on May 30, authorized "sequestration" of personal property for several reasons, the report said. Among these reasons was the fact that an individual has been placed under "surveillance," it added.

"Since there is no legal barrier to placing anyone under surveillance, Proclamation No. 26 can be applied to anyone at all, with an appearance of complying with the legal requirements," the report asserted.

Moreover, the decree set up a complex set of restrictions on trade with persons whose property had

Refugee, 15, Becomes Moslem

John Kuesell, 15 years old, son of a Christian father and a Jewish mother — who with his sister, Barbara, 10, survived the Hitler purges in Nazi Germany and came to New York in 1946 — told how his dislike of strong drink led him to seek a religion specifying abstinence, so that he became a Moslem.

The youth said he had found greater evidence of sobriety among orthodox Moslems and considered the Whahabi sect his choice because it was the most orthodox. He added that after study of the Koran, the sacred scriptures of Islam, he had decided to follow the counsels of the Whahabi, who seek to restore the religion of Mohammed to its original simplicity.

"Outside influences have crept in just as in Christianity and have changed what in my opinion is the truth to a mixture of truth and falsehood," the convert explained. "The aim of the Whahabis is to put out this influence which has existed since the second century after the flight of Mohammed from Mecca to Medina. He fled because he was persecuted.

"I expect eventually to leave the occidental world and go to the Arab world. If I could go now, I'd go."

The young Moslem is a junior in a private academy in Lennox, Mass. His father, Werner Kuesell, had been put into a concentration camp because he would not divorce his wife. The boy went to an aunt in the country and the mother and sister left Berlin to escape the Gestapo. The members of the family were reunited after the war in Berlin and came to the U.S. as refugees a little more than a year ago.

Young Kuesell said that one of his aims as a Moslem was to promote friendship between Arabs and Jews. He desires to study Islamic law at the University of Al-Usher, Cairo, Egypt.

The convert added that he endorsed the proposal of the late Dr. Judah L. Magnes, former president of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, that Palestine become binational, with numerical equality for Arabs and Jews. Young Kuesell said he favored immigration of Arabs and Jews into Palestine "according to the country's economic capacity and the natural growth of population."

The student reported that among the Islamic concepts he liked were the unity of God and acceptance of the Jewish prophets and of Jesus as a great man and prophet of God.

The youth also dislikes coffee. He avoids luxuries, even to not wearing a tie. Young Kuesell said he had done most of his religious research since he came to the U.S. and had done it by himself. His father, before Hitler came to power, was a bank employee, studying to be a certified public accountant.

Demands Humane DP Act For U.S.

Senator Matthew M. Neely, West Virginia Democrat, called for the immediate repeal of the Displaced Persons Act of 1948 and the substitution of a "humane" immigration law that would permit the entrance of 40,000 displaced persons to the United States within the next two years.

Senator Neely spoke at the closing session of the second annual meeting of the United Service for New Americans at the Biltmore Hotel, in New York. Eight hundred persons attended the two-day conference.

Calling the present DP Act "overtly discriminatory," Senator Neely, who defeated Chapman Revercomb, co-author of the DP Act, in last year's Senatorial elections, urged President Truman to lead the fight "for a more liberal immigration program" to help empty the DP camps in Europe.

"As democracy preaches equality of opportunity," he declared, "it must practice it by promptly substituting a fair, liberal and humanitarian measure for the present intolerable Displaced Persons Law. The substitute must be free of all the ridiculous provisions of the original. For example, it must not contain the impossible requirement that to render a displaced person eligible for immigration here he must have not only a job but a house in which to live. The Displaced Persons Commission must be supplied with sufficient funds.

"We have undertaken an international job. Still ringing in our ears are the sentiments of the At-

Father Of Silver Dies In Israel

The death of Rabbi Moshe Silver, eighty-eight, father of Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, former president of the Zionist Organization of America, occurred in Jerusalem. Rabbi Silver was a noted Hebrew scholar and social worker. Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog delivered the eulogy at his funeral.

Rabbi Silver was born in Lithuania, where he studied in Jewish academies, and was ordained before coming to the United States in 1897. He lived for a number of years in New York, where he divided his time between working for Zionist activities and in Hebrew scholarship.

In 1904 he founded the first boys' Hebrew-speaking Zionist Club in America, the Dr. Herzl Zion Club, in New York. It was the original unit of the Young Judea Zionist Organization from which the national Zionist youth movement developed. As a result of his work, Rabbi Silver was known as the spiritual father of

Weizmann Urges Britain, Israel Be Friends

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Provisional President of Israel, at Rehovoth, Israel, expressed deep concern at the recent deterioration of relations between Britain and Israel and appealed to the British people not to pursue a course that must perforce lead to war.

Dr. Weizmann said he always had stood for cooperation between Britain and the Jewish people and hoped despite the bitterness of the tragedies of the past few years that a modus vivendi would be evolved leading to establishment of happy relations between the two peoples, according to the New York Times.

Israel, he declared, wants to remain a neutral country; to accuse her of being an ally or puppet of the Soviet Union against the West or of being an ally of the Western democracies against the East is equally absurd.

He asserted that Israel owned no "Red planes," and there were no Soviet citizens in its defense forces. Strict neutrality is the lifeblood of the state's existence, he added.

There are the facts, said Dr. Weizmann, adding that he was deeply grieved when he saw there was all this misconception in Britain. He appealed to the British people to use their unique influence in the Middle East to help bring peace and reconciliation. It will be in their own best interests, he declared.

Dr. Weizmann said a very serious situation had developed, however, as the result of circumstances beyond the control of Israel that could plunge the whole world into war. Every war, he said, begins with a misunderstanding but there is nothing in the facts to justify the present unhappy developments.

During recent fighting, he continued, Israel has been defending [illegible] the United Nations. He asserted Israel had not carried out an invasion of Egypt. Some of Israeli's troops, he acknowledged, crossed the frontier but only in pursuit of the enemy, which he charged had invaded Israeli territory in defiance of the United Nations Charter and at one time had stood poised for an attack less than twenty miles from Tel Aviv.

Israeli troops, he said, have since been withdrawn across the frontier and there is not a Jewish soldier left on Egyptian territory.

On the other hand, he added, the armies of four Arab states remain on Israeli soil.

Must it be accepted, asked Dr. Weizmann, that the crossing of the frontier was illegal for Israel but legal for the Arabs?

The news of the death of a young Royal Air Force officer who was buried at Ramleh has been received with deep sorrow and sincere regret but it is a death for which Israel cannot be held responsible, Dr. Weizmann declared. He added that the formation to which the officer belonged had flown over a battlefield in an aircraft identical with those used by the Egyptian Air Force. He said it had since been established that at the time of the fighting the national identity of the aircraft was unknown. It was only known they were not Israeli aircraft and they had come from Egypt.

Dr. Weizmann said these facts did not warrant the declaration of a "cold war" and he could not think of any other reason for so doing. He added Israel wanted to make peace with the Arab states and representatives had already flown to Rhodes to negotiate. The provisional President of the Jewish State declared his personal friendship with some Arab leaders had been long and honorable and he knew in time Jew and Arab could learn to live together in peace. This view, he added, is shared by many Englishmen and Col. T. E. Lawrence once said only through cooperation with the Jews could the Arabs grow.

Israel has no designs on the territory of others, Dr. Weizmann asserted, but needs the land awarded by the United Nations to settle the tragic survivors of Nazi persecution whom the Allied armies helped to snatch from certain death.

For this plan, he added, large-scale colonization in the Negeb area is indispensable. If the Negeb is taken away from Israel and annexed by any Arab states contrary to the United Nations decision, it will remain an arid desert, he asserted.

Dr. Weizmann said Israel had no other desire but peace. She has enough to do consolidating the

Aid To Be Greatest In History Of Jews

A total of $272,970,905 will be required this year for reconstruction and immigration among the Jewish people throughout the world, particularly in Israel, it was reported at Atlantic City, N.J., by the beneficiary agencies of the United Jewish Appeal.

Submitting their budgetary requirements to 1,200 delegates in the Chelsea Hotel at the opening of the appeal's tenth anniversary conference, leaders of these agencies termed the program "the greatest in the history of the Jewish people." The appeal raises funds in America for the United Palestine Appeal, the Joint Distribution Committee and the United Service for New Americans.

The United Palestine Appeal, consisting of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, the Palestine Foundation Fund and the Jewish National Fund, is seeking $291,246,000 for mass settlement and development in Israel. The Joint Distribution Committee reported that it required $70,086,400 for emigration assistance and for rehabilitation and reconstruction in Europe and North Africa. The United Service for New Americans, which provides for the adjustment of newcomers to the U. S., has budgetary requirements of $11,644,505.

The program, as outlined by Herman L. Weisman, acting national chairman of the United Palestine Appeal; Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, chairman of the European executive council of the Joint Distribution Committee, and Edwin Rosenberg, president of the United Service for New Americans, has these major objectives:

(1) Liquidation of the problem of the Jewish displaced persons before the end of the year. More than

A.J.C. Says Israel Speaks Only For Citizens

The American Jewish Committee ended its forty-second annual meeting at the Astor Hotel, in New York with the election of Jacob Blaustein, Baltimore industrialist, as president, and the adoption of a statement defining the principles that will guide the organization in "the coming years."

Mr. Blaustein succeeds former Supreme Court Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, who had announced his retirement. President of the American Trading Production Corporation, Mr. Blaustein headed the committee's delegation to the Paris Peace Conference. This delegation pressed for human rights clauses in the treaties with former enemy nations. He and Mr. Proskauer were consultants to the United States delegation at the San Francisco Conference in 1945 at which the United Nations was organized.

The Committee's statement of views, characterizing the establishment of Israel as an event "of historic significance," said:

"We look forward to Israel's assumption of its full place among the family of nations as a government guaranteeing complete equality to all its inhabitants, without regard to race, creed or national origin, and as an advocate of liberty and peace in the Near East and throughout the world.

"Citizens of the United States are Americans and citizens of Israel are Israelis; this we affirm with all its implications; and just as our own Government speaks only for its citizens, so Israel speaks only for its citizens.

"Within the framework of American interests, we shall aid in the upbuilding of Israel as a vital spiritual and cultural center and in the development of its ca-

Jews Picket Against Pianist

Walter Gieseking, German pianist who performed in German-held territory throughout the war, was taken into custody by immigration officials in New York, his projected tour of the United States and Canada was cancelled. The announcement was made by the Justice Department in Washington less than two hours before he was to have begun the first concert of the tour in Carnegie Hall before a capacity audience of 2,760 persons.

Pickets were gathering outside the closed doors protesting against Mr. Gieseking's appearance when the cancellation was announced. Outside the auditorium were upwards of 200 pickets, most of them representing the five borough councils of the Jewish War Veterans. Others carried placards of the N. C. A. S. P. and the American Veterans Committee. A special police detail was on duty outside and inside the hall to keep order.

Some of the pickets' placards bore these legends: "We fought them, don't you pay them"; "Herr Gieseking will play a funeral dirge for 6,000,000 Jews" and "Gieseking plays tonight, will Dan Kock play next week?"

Sidney Stein, department commander of the Jewish War Veterans, kept his pickets on duty until the crowd of disappointed ticket-holders swallowed them up. He dismissed his pickets at 8.10, but the N. C. A. S. P. kept on.

So did several smaller organizations—the Jewish People's Fraternal Order, Jewish Gold Star Mothers, and the Committee for the Negro in the Arts. One portly gentleman walked up and down waving a rosary over the pickets' heads. He said he represented "Christianity."

Public protests had been made by the American Jewish Congress, the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, Representative Arthur G. Klein, Democrat, of New York, and the National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions, one of the groups that supported Henry A. Wallace in last year's Presidential campaign.

According to the Justice Department, "sufficient evidence" came into the hands of immigration authorities to warrant a full-scale investigation.

Just because the mercury is shivering in the bottom of the thermometer tube is no reason why we should seal ourselves into air-tight chambers these early winter nights. It is better to use an extra blanket or two and leave the window open than to risk colds by sleeping in dry, stuffy rooms.

Peace Rests On Wish For It, Says Einstein

Dr. Albert Einstein, who left the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn, N.Y., after undergoing an abdominal operation, said he saw no "objective reason" for the East-West split, and warned against a "cheap compromise" with power politics by the United Nations on Israel. He will be seventy years old in March.

Dr. Einstein was operated on December 31, and, apparently fit and hearty, returned to his home in Princeton, N.J. He toured the hospital accompanied by Max Abelman, secretary of the board of trustees, and autographed a mural on the wall of a room in the pediatrics ward known as the "Children of Many Nations Room." He signed the painting next to the signature of his old friend, the late Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

In an interview as he prepared to leave the hospital at 555 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, Dr. Einstein said to the New York Herald Tribune:

"There is no objective reason which would justify the hostile attitude that exists between the East and West. What is needed is a sincere and genuine desire for constructive co-operation, instead of the existing futile and dangerous military mentality."

Asked for his opinion on the best way to find world peace, Dr. Einstein said simply, "Where there is no will there is no way."

Dr. Einstein maintained that the U. N.'s inability so far to solve the Palestine problem was weakening its authority throughout the world.

"Whether and how much political influence the U. N. will obtain," he said, "depends completely upon the confidence which the peoples of the world have in the honesty and incorruptibility of that organization. Any cheap compromise of the U. N. with power politics weakens seriously its moral position in the world. That is why the delay in admitting Israel to the U. N. has done great damage to its prestige and influence."

Commenting on Israel's chances for survival, Dr. Einstein said, "I have no doubt whatsoever that the new state of Israel will have a very bright future, since I am convinced that Israel and the Arab states can co-exist peacefully and fruitfully as soon as their relationship is no longer affected by systematic disturbances coming from outside."

Dr. Einstein left the doctors and nurses swapping stories about his stay in the hospital.

Guarded by police to prevent delay or jostling in the crowd of newsreel and newspaper men and hospital personnel in the halls, the scientist was whisked out of the back door of the hospital to an automobile which took him home to Princeton, N.J.

Except for dictating replies to written questions from a reporter, Dr. Einstein refused to see the press during his stay on the ground that his illness was "not of any public interest." However, he did overhear one hospital authority speaking sharply to a reporter outside of his room.

"Don't be angry," Dr. Einstein called out. "He's got to make a living."

He then asked that the reporter be brought in. He shook hands with him and said: "Sorry. No interview."

The nurses who had helped to take care of Dr. Einstein said that when he left he had written jingles for all of them—"little poems," he called them—and signed them Albert Einstein. They wouldn't tell what the jingles said.

Other nurses and attendants who had not been assigned to look after him gave his room a thorough going-over as soon as he left. There was a rumor some one saw the mathematician writing figures on a pad. Whether the scribblings were a new theory on the basic laws of nature or just high-level doodling didn't matter to the hospital staff. They just wanted any scrap of paper with his handwriting.

One authenticated story was that Dr. Einstein overheard a doctor saying the hospital was short on private rooms. He immediately protested that he was "getting much better." Why, he asked, didn't they move him to a ward, giving his private room to some one who needed it more? He withdrew his request only when authorities convinced him he would be "more trouble" in a ward.

Shortly before he left his hospital room Dr. Einstein received a cake, bearing the legend: "Good health for many years to come." It was a gift from Max Abelman, secretary of the hospital board, and S. Ralph Lazrus, a personal friend of the scientist. It was in Mr. Lazrus's car that Dr. Einstein was driven to Princeton. He is a member of the Institute for Advanced Studies and lives at 112 Mercer Street in Princeton.

The American Jewish Congress made public a letter in which its chairman, Irving Miller, called on President Truman to investigate what it called the Federal Housing Administration's "policy of encouraging racial segregation in housing." Mr. Miller's letter cited a paragraph in leases signed by tenants admitted to homes built in Long Island by William J. Levitt and his associates, in which the tenants were required to agree that the premises be used only by Caucasians. This clause, while unenforceable, Mr. Miller said, is offensive to the Constitution, and the fact that FHA insures Levitt projects, while refusing to insure projects intended for both Negro and white occupancy, illustrates its general attitude. Mr. Miller asked the president to reverse both aspects of the policy he attributed to FHA.

Professor Abraham Neuman, president of The Dropsie College, in Philadelphia, Pa., will be the lecturer at the Eighth Annual Institute for Christian Clergy and Educators, on Monday, February 7, at Temple Emanu-El, in Montreal.

Blind Girl To Complete Lab Course

New equipment for making scientific drawings and reproductions of microscope slides have enabled Hannah Seidenfeld to be the first blind student at Hunter College, in New York, to complete laboratory courses in physiology. The device for making the drawings, which was designed for Miss Seidenfeld by Charles Ritter of the technical research department of the American Foundation for the Blind.

Miss Seidenfeld uses aluminum or tin foil instead of paper and draws outlines upon the light metal with a sharp knife to make a raised impression. The tin foil is usually placed upon a board and has a sheet of rubber beneath it. Incorrect lines may be cancelled out by drawing another line through them and Miss Seidenfeld has found that she can get an accurate mental picture of the drawing by tracing the lines with her fingers.

Micro-organisms are described to Miss Seidenfeld by either a teacher or another student and she is able to make a recognizable, although not expert, reproduction. In the study of physiology she also uses the departments' clay models of the different types of cells. "I also got a great deal of aid from using anatomy models," she says. These models are plastic reproduction of the human body, from which vital organs as well as parts of the skeleton may be removed layer by layer.

Miss Seidenfeld, a pre-social work major, was required to take a year's course in physiology in order to qualify in her field. She is preparing to teach the newly blinded, both children and the aged. A blind person, she believes, is the best able and most sympathetic teacher to those who have to learn to live without sight.

Because she has "a mental picture of the way rooms are placed," Miss Seidenfeld finds her way to classes with little trouble. She takes class notes in Braille and uses the typewriter for homework and answering examination questions. She is now learning to write her own name in script. Most of the textbooks Miss Seidenfeld "reads" are lent to her by the Braille Branch of the Public Library. When material is not available in Braille, sound-cribe or talking books, students read to her. In a basketry course, Miss Seidenfeld and a sighted student, who wishes to teach the blind, worked together. Miss Seidenfeld used a linoleum outline and wove the basket around it.

Miss Seidenfeld is now learning to use a jig-saw map of the United States, made for her by Mrs. Beatrice Roth, a Hunter graduate, upon the suggestion of Miss Emily Jessen, a blind home teacher at the Lighthouse. The map, which is made of wood, has removable states with the names written in Braille.

"I'm excited about this map," Miss Seidenfeld says, "because for the first time I'm becoming aware of the relative size and shape of the different states."

Congress Dealings Over The Film, "Oliver Twist"

By Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg, Of Toronto; Chairman, Joint Public Relations Committee, Canadian Jewish Congress, Central Region

In the October 4th issue, "Time" topped its Cinema section with an account of the protest launched by American Jews against the Fagin-portrayal in the British (J. Arthur Rank) movie, "Oliver Twist". The article categorically reported (with apparent approval) that the Toronto Jewish Congress "decided to drop the matter", after calling on Rank representatives to complain, and "one" was quoted as saying, "An Englishman has just as much right to complain about Bill Sikes." More than three weeks later, "Life" repeated the story, ascribing the "Bill Sikes" epigram to "Bnai Brith". . . .

Obviously the story refers to the Joint Public Relations Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress (Central Region) and Bnai Brith, of which the writer is chairman. (A "Toronto Jewish Congress" does not exist.) What are the facts?

On September 3rd, "Oliver Twist" was privately screened for the Committee. Fagin aroused unanimous condemnation, as an effectively-executed, if unwitting, movie version of crude anti-Semitic propaganda. One comment was, "This must have been produced right after the hanging of the sergeants!" Public protest was tentatively turned down; we believed that sensationalism would merely lengthen the queues. Unfortunately, however, Toronto had been selected for the gala international premiere on September 9th.

The Fagin image, a hopping, verminous, highly-costumed caricature, was profoundly disturbing. An expert psychologist of the Canadian Mental Hygiene Association, when asked to see it and give an opinion, said he had "already seen it," in London. His judgment left no uncertainty: Rank's Fagin is "destructive of healthy group relationships, particularly among children." The next day the New York Anti-Defamation League office requested a public statement of protest, to strengthen American Jewry's anti-"Twist" campaign.

On September 9th, I informed Rank's Canadian branch, in advance, that such a statement was contemplated. Within an hour, its public-relations manager interrupted the Patricia Roc fan-fare (for the premiere) to urge a conference. The interview took place in my Temple study next morning. Mr. Sidney Wynne, personal assistant to Mr. Rank, headed the delegation; the Jewish community was officially represented by the secretary of the Public Relations Committee and the writer, who quickly divested the conferees of any shred of doubt as to Jewry's position.

The "Oliver Twist" Fagin was a cinematic reproduction of the Jew-Satan mediaeval stereotype, with a Streicher trade-mark, and was likely to exert a pernicious influence, on youth above all. I read a prepared statement and took care to announce that it would be transmitted to the Anti-Defamation League, for United States release only. (Part of it appeared in the subsequent issue of "Variety" — unnoticed by "Time".)

Mr. Wynne, while admitting that Fagin was overdrawn, ventured the opinion that most of the "Oliver Twist" characters displayed mean traits, and declared, "An Englishman might have just as much right to complain about Bill Sikes." "On the contrary," I replied, "Sikes evokes sympathy, as a drunken, slum-bred, irresponsible tool of his master, the diabolical Fagin." ("Time-Life" reversed the nub of this conversation.)

The Rank spokesman evinced genuine and gracious concern with the potentially anti-social effects of Fagin, and suggested certain ameliorative procedures. They even proposed that an "adult" rating, as in England, be sought for the picture, although the Ontario Board of Censors had already approved it as child entertainment. (These techniques for minimizing the evil were accepted in good faith and the Rank firm later proved its full readiness to implement them in every case.) Yet, only a withdrawal of the film would really solve the problem! That was made clear — but an expenditure of $1,600,000 and three years, as computed by Mr. Wynne, rendered such drastic action "difficult."

Before the conference ended, Mr. Wynne expressed his intention to let Mr. Rank know, by trans-Atlantic phone, the reasons for Jewry's deep opposition to "Oliver Twist". A mimeographed copy of our statement, with a cursory "communique" on the interview, was sent to Jewish communities throughout the Dominion.

Where did "Time" find authority for the October 4th story? When the Toronto representative was queried, he denied any knowledge whatever. It happened during his vacation; "another chap" had been on duty. (Later, he confided that the substitute contacted "a man close to the Jewish community".) "Time" had mentioned "the theatre manager" as a source. Toronto's Rank officials insisted that was impossible; their managers were specifically forbidden to make any statements.

On October 7th, a letter went from me to a "Time" senior editor, Mr. Francis Brown, named by the Toronto representative as the "proper person." With brevity and careful moderation, it outlined the factual truth: — the matter decidedly had not been "dropped"; at a personal conference, the protest of the Jewish community was "unmistakably" placed before Rank, in lieu of a public blast which would simply build up a larger "box-office"; withdrawal of the picture was indicated as "the only complete solution"; the "Bill Sikes" comment definitely did not emanate from any Jewish source during the "one official interview" that occurred. . . . The letter closed with the trust that the "misleading" news report of October 4th would be "corrected."

The first "fruit" of that highly-disciplined retort to "Time" was revealed in its issue of October 18th, at the head of the letter column: three communications bitterly resenting the attempt of "minority" or "pressure" groups to bar "Oliver Twist." The first one applauded the "dignified" and "rational" tactic, by contrast, of the Toronto (Jewish) Congress! . . . No other letters appeared.

Three days later, in a New York phone talk, Mr. Brown informed me that he had turned my complaint over to the Letter Department in "routine" fashion. I underlined the "un-routine" nature of a letter drawing attention to a serious error, especially since the error had generated "confusion" on an international plane. The approval of "Oliver Twist" for the American Zone of Germany was then stirring warm debate, and the reaction of Canadian Jewry had a vital bearing on the issue! Toronto alone, among the metropolitan centers in North America, had experienced the actual showing of the movie! Surprised inquiries to our Public Relations Committee indicated that the world-wide effort to reduce the unhealthful effects of "Oliver Twist" was being jeopardized by "Time"'s mistake! It had published corrections in the past! Why not now? Is not truth important?

Mr. Brown switched the wire to Mr. Mills, another senior editor. After sincerely advising a non-protest policy, and emphasizing the general commendation of Toronto Jewry's alleged adherence to it, he promised that the October 4th story would be rectified in the forthcoming issue. (He also made a casual remark about the "mutual friendliness" of Rank and "Time".)

The following week, "Time" in Toronto conveyed an urgent appeal from the publisher himself, that we give up further insistence on publication of my letter; in view of the laudatory stream still pouring in to his desk, its appearance now would be "embarrassing". I proposed, instead, a personal chat. Only a few moments prior to the scheduled meeting, on October 26, I saw an astonishing paragraph in "Life"; the "Time" story of October 4th had been re-printed there, almost verbatim (and surely late enough for correction!) . . . Toronto's "Time" representative, at the interview, did not explain this —but he no longer denied the obvious reluctance of his superiors to print my letter, and proposed that another be formulated, omitting any demand for "Oliver Twist"'s suppression. (The October 7th letter did not contain such a clause!) I agreed, if "Time" "guarantees to give it space." He would phone the publisher for the commitment.

A week passed; the Secretary of our Public Relations Committee asked for a reply. Yes, the publisher had been apprised; the second-letter decision, however, must await a conference of the "publication board." "Time"'s final verdict was not submitted until November 12th, apparently after Toronto had conveyed a report of our impatience; it came as a letter from the publisher, Mr. Linen. It began by proferring sympathy, continued with the advice that a revival of the question would be "unsatisfactory, if not unwise," contended that in deciding to withhold a public statement "we did in effect drop the matter", and once more complimented the "Toronto Jewish Congress" for not interfering "with distribution" of "Oliver Twist". . . .

English Jewry did not register a public official protest about "Oliver Twist", although Britain's Board of Jewish Deputies privately revealed to the Canadian Jewish Congress its belief that the movie was harmful. Thus the Rank firm brought it to Canada in technical innocence, and a cycle of compromise and timidity got started. The Canadian Public Relations Committee is unwilling to become the second link in this "chain reaction", whereby the twisted report of its attitude towards "Oliver Twist" may be exploited to weaken the Jewish position elsewhere. Therefore this little drama of "Time-Life" had to be unravelled, although its principal character seems to be journalistic amorality. Is "Time" careless—or callous?

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS by Don Graham

The world's most successful men vary widely in their abilities. But they all know how to make decisions.

This ability is important to all of us, for life presents an unending series of choices.

The following suggestions may help you in making up your mind:

1. Don't lean on others. Seek their opinion on important matters if you wish, but make your own decisions.

2. Be sure you understand what your objective really is or should be.

3. If much depends on your decision, try writing down the pro's and con's in opposite columns. Studying the list will help you.

4. Don't argue with yourself too long. Usually it's better to act — and risk mistakes. We learn by trial and error.

As your decision-power improves you will become more a man of action.

U.S. Educators To Aid Hebrew U.

In the expansion of its faculty and facilities to meet the educational needs of Israel, the Department of Education of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem will avail itself of the guidance and assistance of the Advisory Committee of prominent American educators appointed by the National Council of Jewish Women, said Dr. Eliezer Rieger, Head of the Department, who is now in the U.S. The organization will make $38,000 available to the Department in 1949 and 1950.

Staff members are needed by the Department to train its student teachers, who in turn will spread throughout Israel the benefits of the most advanced thinking in American education. The Advisory Committee will keep the Department advised of the latest advances in education and, ultimately, when fellowships are granted, provide guidance to Hebrew University students who come to America.

Members of the Committee include Dr. Sidney Hook, Chairman of the Department of Philosophy of New York University; Dr. Horace M. Kallen, professor of philosophy at the New School for Social Research; Dr. P. B. Berkson, professor of Education at Dropsie College, in Philadelphia; Dr. Alexander Dushkin, executive vice-president of the Jewish Education Committee of New York; and Dr. Ernest Simon, lecturer in the Foundation of Education at Hebrew University. The professor of the psychology of Education was killed last year.

The Department must also find a professor to train teachers to deal with the hundreds of children who came to Israel bearing the scars of the war, concentration camps and shattered homes. Many of them were interned at Cyprus. These children need careful guidance if they are to adjust to life in Israel and to develop into healthy citizens of the new state. This task is essential to the successful absorption of newcomers who enter Israel every month.

Describing the Department of Education as the focal point for all educational activity in Israel, Dr. Rieger stated that it has the cream of all Israeli students, the most promising of the Hebrew University graduates; though small, the largest and best qualified faculty in the field of education in the country; two experimental schools which enable its students to practice teaching while in training; and an excellent, if modest, research library. Dr. Rieger reported that there are no women on the faculty of the entire University at present, and expressed the hope that the Department of Education would lead the way in correcting this omission. He emphasized the importance of the Department's continued support of the experimental schools which are so vital a part of the teacher training program.

one tablespoonful vanilla

The Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society said that 169 DPs were distributed in 28 communities throughout the United States, including cities in Louisiana, Texas, and California, having been guaranteed jobs and housing by relatives, Isaac L. Asofsky, of New York, executive director, stated. Romek Jonas, 19, and his elder brother, Joseph, 23, who spent the last 10 years of their lives in camps, first in concentration camps, and later in DP camps, came to the first home they had in a decade. When the Nazis overran the little Polish town in which the Jonas family lived, they killed all of the family, about 50 people, except Joseph and Romek. The boys escaped, but were captured later and sent to a concentration camp. Thus began their decade of camp life. The Jonas brothers are now living with Solomon Langer, an uncle, at 2095 Creston Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Elo Montag, 38, who is now in the U. S., had been living underground for more than five years. During the occupation of his native Galician village by the Germans, Montag's wife and small child were killed. Montag miraculously escaped and went underground, where he stayed until the end of the war, sometimes coming out of his hiding places only at night, and at other times sheltered by friendly Gentile families. He is living with a cousin, Joseph Steininger, at 775 East 175th Street, Bronx, N.Y. A total of 2,493 arrived in the U.S. since the DP Act went into effect July 1, 1948.

"CANADA UNLIMITED"

Louis Maheu, born in Quebec in 1650, was our first Canadian-born medical man. While practising, Maheu acted as harbour-master of Quebec in his spare time.

In 1724, the Sisters des hospitalières de St. Jean, built a 100-bed hospital at Louisbourg, N.S. To help pay expenses each ship in port was assessed 10 pounds of codfish a day.

Canadian medicine kept pace with man's knowledge. McGill University gave Canada its first graduate in medicine in 1833. Canada's first woman doctor was Emily H. Stowe who practised in Toronto in 1868.

Heroes of medicine—men like Charles H. Best, whose many contributions to medicine include the method of preventing blood clots during surgery—are showing the way to even greater discoveries, because there's room to grow in Canada Unlimited.

The full story of Canada's growth is told in "Canada Unlimited", an illustrated 144-page book published by the O'Keefe Foundation. Immigration into Israel is proceeding now at the rate of 30,000 a month, Arthur Lourie, Consul General of Israel in New York, told members of the Federation of Jewish Women's Organizations at their twenty-ninth annual convention, in New York, at the Waldorf-Astoria. He said the small native population could not supply the food, clothing and other necessities of life for the newcomers, and that this therefore became a job for world Jewry.

In The Steps Of Moses

"And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown up that he went out unto his brethren and looked on their burdens." (Exodus II—11)

We read in the Torah of the birth and development of one of the greatest, not only of Israel, but of all mankind. Because of strange circumstances, Moses was brought up in the palace of King Pharoah. In his youth, respect and honour were showered upon Moses. He might have remained within the palace walls enjoying the luxuries and the mirth and the pleasure of royal Egyptian life. But very early, Moses was destined to reveal by his actions, that he was to become the Great Leader. And so the Bible records, "Moses went out among his brethren, and looked upon their burdens." Because Moses was possessed of greatness, he dared to leave the palace and seek out his own people.

As he walked about, he saw an Egyptian smiting a Hebrew. No doubt others had seen this cruel act, but failed to notice it, or they had become hardened to this cruelty. Not so Moses. Possessed of loving kindness and above all, a high sense of justice, Moses took a stand in defence of the poor Hebrew slave. Still another act in defence of right reveals the greatness of Moses. He finds two Hebrews striving together. That must have broken his spirit. Here were two that should have stood united and instead were divided. He rightly protested against their behaviour because truth was his greatest yearning and aspiration. Because Moses dared to champion right and the cause of the downtrodden, he was forced to flee Egypt.

In Midian, a strange land, he again sought the opportunity to battle against injustice. He found that the daughters of the priests of Midian, as they came to water their father's flock, were dealt with unkindly by shepherds. Moses helped the daughters. For him morality knows no geographical boundaries. Although an alien in a strange land, he is willing to uphold the law of morality and seeks to establish justice.

Ahad Ha-Am, the great Jewish philosopher, rightly tries to categorize Moses. Was he a military hero? Far from it. The biblical record does not indicate that Moses played any part as a warrior. Moses surely cannot be characterized as a statesman. For when he had to appear before Pharoah to plead the cause of the enslaved, he found himself weak in speech and in the art of diplomacy. He therefore requested that his brother Aaron come with him. In a sense, too, Moses is not to be considered as the law-giver. For every law-giver formulates laws for the time and place in which he lives. Not so with Moses. The laws which he gave, were meant for the most part to be applied to the future when Israel would have entered their own land. What then is Moses? We agree with Ahad Ha-Am, who adheres to the great Jewish tradition that Moses was a prophet, and that "There has never arisen since in Israel, a prophet like unto Moses."

What are some of the characteristics of the prophet? Primarily, a prophet is a man of truth. In the pursuit of truth, the prophet knows of no compromises and of no excuses. He concentrates his mind and heart on the ideal and idealism. Moses was the prototype of all the great prophets that came into Israel. He was the Saviour of his people, and because he was a prophet, he suffered, as do all those men and women who are possessed of the prophetic spirit. Often the heart of Moses was broken because his people least understood him. His people were not prepared to catch his vision and to appreciate his ideals. They murmured against him, but the prophet, despite his hardships, could not resist preaching his message of justice and righteousness.

Because of the prophetic ideal of Moses, Israel in turn became a prophetic people. For Moses gave unto Israel two of the greatest doctrines upon which hinges the salvation of humanity. The first of these is the proclamation, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One." At a time when the world was spiritually in darkness and people worshipped idolatry and superstition, Moses dared to proclaim that God is the Universal Father. The corollary of this doctrine is the unity of mankind, hence the injunction "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Thirty-three centuries have passed since Moses, and the world is still struggling to make real the unity of God and the unity of mankind. The world has failed to realize universal freedom and universal justice. In the struggles of the United Nations to build an enduring peace, we see revealed the visions and the hopes of the greatest Jew of all times, Moshe Rabenu, Moses, our teacher and prophet. Because Moses lost kinship with God he lost kinship with his fellow-man.

It was Moses who gave unto Israel a mission to bear witness to God's unity. Our very survival and revival as a people were made possible by our witnessing as the servants of God.

How thrilling it is to behold Israel, reborn in Palestine, now engaged in writing a constitution, but much of that constitution is rooted in the prophetic tradition of Moses with its yearning for social justice and universal righteousness. We believe with the election in Israel and the adoption of the constitution in due course, Israel will mark a turning point not only in Jewish history but in human history. Indeed, the ancient Cabbalists were right when they believed that Moses was reincarnated in every age. Certainly in our own day Moses lives again through the rebirth of "The kingdom of priests and the holy nation."

100,000 Jews remain in camps and DP centers.

(2) Immigration into Israel of a minimum of 100,000 Jewish refugees from the DP centers in Central Europe, from eastern European countries and from North Africa.

(3) Reconstruction of Jewish communities in western Europe and rehabilitation in eastern European countries.

(4) A vast housing program in Israel to absorb immigration averaging no less than 15,000 a month, to house more than 40,000 newly arrived immigrants still living in reception camps.

(5) Increased assistance to the larger number of refugees expected to reach the United States under a revised DP Act.

(6) Adequate relief for 1,000,000 Jews in North Africa.

(7) Development of the Negeb, southern desert in Israel, as a center for the settlement of hundreds of thousands of Jews.

William Rosenwald of New York, national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, announced that a preparatory subcommittee of 130 representatives of Jewish communities would survey the fiscal needs of the agencies and then recommend a goal to the conference for the 1949 appeal campaign. Last year's goal was $250,000,000, of which more than $150,000,000 was raised.

Mr. Rosenwald asserted that the accomplishments of the appeal since its inception ten years ago "have brought us to the crossing of a threshold into a new era for Jews overseas and for Jews in Israel."

Mr. Weisman asserted that Israel's borders had been secured. He added that "the next step must be a tremendous program of agricultural and industrial expansion to strengthen the country's economy and to make possible the absorption of large numbers of immigrants."

Dr. Schwartz declared that "the emptying of the Jewish DP camps depends on the Jewish communities of the United States; they have it in their power to assure a visa for every Jew in a DP camp who wants to go to Israel."

Harry N. Rosenfeld, a member of the United States Displaced Persons Commission, reported that White House leaders had given the commission "personal assurances that the President would actively back and support" major amendments to the DP Act of 1948. These would enable at least 400,000 refugees from Europe to enter the United States within two years.

been sequestered or was likely to be sequestered, it was asserted.

Consequently, although only sixty-eight published sequestration orders had been counted by Sept. 30 — sixty-seven of them affecting Jewish individuals—the decree has in fact caused an "economic quarantine" of the Jewish community, the report held.

Among other decrees that were said to have had an oppressive effect on Jews was one regulating the percentage of Egyptian citizens who must be employed in any company. Although more than 90 per cent of Egypt's Jews were born in the country, only about 5,000 have been able to qualify as citizens, it was asserted.

Additional decrees were said to make possible mass eviction of Jews from their homes and tacitly to permit police to conduct searches without warrants.

The Committee promised to join with "all other Americans, of whatever creed or color, who devote themselves to the continued fight against those who through bigotry and prejudice endeavor to imperil the rights of any groups in this land and thus divide our country and undermine the foundations of American liberty."

In bringing up to date its statement of views, first promulgated in 1943, the committee pledged its efforts in behalf of human rights and the adoption of "liberal, just and non-discriminatory immigration laws." The statement also stressed that "we cherish the ideals and traditions of America and dedicate to develop and enrich its cultural and political life."

"But where our duties are most obvious—to those who have suffered most—we are supposed to turn a deaf ear. This must not be. We have promised that these people will not be forced to return to homelands where the precious freedoms are still blacked out."

Lieut. Col. Jerry M. Sage, of the Civil Affairs Division of the United States Army in Europe told the meeting that the American nation had undertaken a "tremendous screening program among displaced persons in the American zone in Germany" to eliminate voluntary members of the Nazi party or active collaborators with the enemy from any chance of reaching American shores.

He said that an Army survey in DP centers in 1946 had revealed that 10 per cent of the total DP population at that time was tinged with Fascist ideology and were removed from the camps, many of them going to jail.

Other speakers included William Rosenwald, honorary president of the United Service for New Americans and National chairman of the United Jewish Appeal; Edwin Rosenberg, president of the service, and Ralph E. Samuel, president of the Federation of Jewish philanthropies of New York.

ABC and HIGH STANDARDS GO TOGETHER

In qualifying for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations, publishers are doing more than providing advertisers with the facts about the circulation of their publications.

They are also giving active support to the principle that advertising space should be bought and sold only on the basis of verified information — a principle that has contributed in large measure to the interests of all advertisers.

In Canada, the Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.
